All, Update to Bill's message.

Andy Blaney and I spoke with Rich Fetzer and others this afternoon. CNN is expected to be in Dimock a bit later now - that is, the week of Feb 6. We understand that we are waiting for more information from CNN with respect to what it intends to film. Apparently CNN intends to only film the sampling process without any narrative and will not interview anyone. (Note that does not mean that CNN would not want future visits and/or interviews.)

Andy also spoke to and reminded his Techlaw POC of the contract terms regarding confidentiality and publicity;

All -

I was able to have a conversation with Mick Kulik regarding the CNN request. Mick had spoken with them yesterday. Based upon Mick's conversation with CNN they are only proposing to film while at Dimock. There are no interviews planned. According to Mick the story that CNN is planning is not focused on Dimock but the generic issue of fracking. They want some footage of the wells being sampled and perhaps the water being delivered. I am advised this information was provided to HQ and they are comfortable with what CNN has indicated they want to do.

That said, we all understand how things can change and want to make sure we are all on the same page here in the Region as well as in Dimock. My understanding is that CNN will be in Dimock on Monday, January 30. We should all contact our folks in the field to alert them of CNN's visit, what they have indicated they will be doing and reinforce that they should not be granting interviews with CNN. Thanks.
